FLOWERING CRABAPPLES are one of the best of all ornamental flowering trees.

Because they are vigorous growers with attractive bark and foliage and an outstanding display of blossoms early in the Spring.

And because they require no petting or pampering. They transplant easily and, due to their vigorous disease and insect free habit, make an immediate show yet never crowd the garden as they remain a low tree under 20 feet quite suited to even the smallest grounds. With this in mind these three varieties are especially recommended.

HOPA—Covered with bright red buds bursting into deep pink fragrant flowers followed by lots of tiny red apples in Summer, the leaves are a rich red-bronze.

ELEYI—The light red blossoms open from red buds just as the young red leaves begin to unfurl and are followed by red fruit and rich green leaves later in the season.

NIEDZWETZ KYANA—A very conspicuous form with purplish leaves and reddish bark and wood. The flowers and fruit are a deep purple-red.

ORIENT PEAR

FOR FLOWERS—The brightest, slickest deepest green leaves—like big Gardenia leaves—all summer and fall. In spring a cloud of delicate blossoms. Just about the earliest flower that blooms.

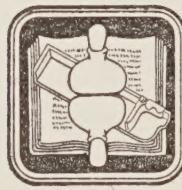

FOR FRUIT—At last we have a pear that really will bear fruit—and really good fruit too. The flesh is creamy-white melting and juicy. The flavor is mild, sweet, subacid and the core small. In other words they are good pears—good to eat. They are excellent for canning too—if you can wait that long.

Blight Resistant—That is what the experiment station says. If you or I were describing Orient Pear we would call it "blight free" because the station says that in the more than 20 years they have tested Orient Pear they have found no blight. They have to be conservative. To me, no blight in 20 years means BLIGHT FREE.

PRIDE OF MOBILE (Tall-growing Variety)

A very hardy type which has made the Azalea Trails in and around Mobile famous. Beautiful bright Watermelon-Red blooms cover the plant and makes a wonderful display. A fast grower, very hardy and easily grown. One of the best varieties.

CHRISTMAS CHEER (Low-growing Variety)

Small but very attractive flowers of rich Crimson-Red. Small, glassy leaves on a compact plant. Hardy. Among the best.

CORAL BELLS (Low-growing Variety)

This is the attractive little beauty which you so often see in Florist windows; dainty bell-shaped, coral pink flowers shading deeper in the center. A profuse bloomer. Small, rounded, shining foliage. Compact growth.

FORMOSA (Tall-growing Variety)

Purplish-pink blooms of large size. Unusually sturdy, with very dark green foliage. Hardy and easy to grow. Very attractive because of its delicate coloring and large, thick foliage. Probably the fastest grower of all the Azaleas.

HINODEGIRI (Low-growing Variety)

This is very popular variety. Fiery red flowers on a dwarf well-shaped plant. Slow growth; foliage round, evergreen. Blooms profusely over a long period. The blossoms cover the plant in such a manner that you can hardly find a leaf when in full bloom. Excellent as a pot-plant or low hedge.

SNOW (Low-growing Variety)

Good-sized clusters of large flowers of the purest snowy white. Glossy green leaves on a free-flowering plant. Regardless of what other Azaleas you have, your planting will be improved by some white-flowering ones like snow.
